This project is governed by facts and content, not opinions and beliefs. We generally try to be polite and nice to each other, but we do not let personal views override facts.

Your views

- Everyone can have their own View of the world...
- ... but you can not force your views on anybody else, including: not expecting them to think in the same frame about those views or apply censorship in their communication because of your views.
- You must not be offended by anyone else's (different) views
- Views and preferences are not facts.
- Decisions in this project are based solely on facts and technical properties, not views.

Reputation: content vs. manner

- Content > manners
- Your reputation is determined by the content you contribute...
- ... and not by the style/manner/presentation of the said content ...
- Your present-day reputation is determined by your present-day contribution.

Reputation: social network vs. content

- Content > social network
- Your reputation depends on your own contribution, but it does not depend on who you are and who your friends are.
- Your contribution to the project is solely judged by your activity within the project, never by your past, present or future activity elsewhere.
- We are primarily here to advance the project, and building a social network is only a side effect, not the goal of the effort.

Failing to comply

- Decisions are made by the project owners/admins.
- Decisions are subjective - we will not pretend social interaction can be judged objectively.
- The project owners/admins may decide that a member's contribution does not justify their behavior and eject the member from the community.
